Man's Power to Resist Evil. Henry Ward Bescher, in a late sermon, exressed himself as follows :-All men are clothed with ability efficiently to resist evil. Therefore I affirm the existence of a plenary power of men over themselves, by which they can control their whole being, so that it shall be coincident with natural law and moral law. This is the side which has been made weak in every age of the world by philosophy. Different philosophies, springing from different roots and elements, have agreed very largely in attempting to world by philosophy. Different philosophies, springing from different roots and elements, have agreed very largely in attempting to show that men were is some way compelled to follow their nature. In our day these philosophies, if possible, are more rife than they ever were before, for they are coming to be used on the side of physiology. A fuller knowledge of natural law, the introduction of many elements of knowledge that have hitherto been hidden from our understanding, is bringing the attendant evils of new discoveries in truth. There is a great deal of skepticism springing out of the bosom of a great deal of good.

Men once erred by giving too little influence to the constitution of things in men. There have been a great many that have taught that all men were born substantially alike. Certainly, the influence of their teachings has been to make it appear that all men were alike responsible—responsible, that is, as if each one was just as liable to temptation, and was endowed with just as much power of resisting temptation as every other.

But now the tendency is to go to the opposite extreme. Since men have found out that organization is a fact; that men differ from each other according to the various elements in the composition of their body and that organization is a fact; that men differ from each other according to the various elements in the composition of their body and mind; that different men carry different qualities in them, in differing proportions; and that the responsibility of each man is to be estimated, not by any comprehensive philosophical principle, but by his own nature Since this truth has become more popularly diffused and believed, there is a tendency among men to go over to laxity and demorralization on that side, and to argue that men are so made that their nature is inevitable and irresmitble; that their being placed in certain conditions and circumstances will determine what they shall feel and will and do; and that their being good or bad is the result and that their being good or bad is the result of the outworking of two necessities, one psychological within, and the other circum-stantial without. This is a favorite ground in our day. It is a kind of physiological naturalism and fatalism which I never can believe.

PROPER MODE OF PRESERVING THE EYES.

Hall's Journal of Health says: Multitudes of men and women have made their eyes weak for life by the too free use of eyesight in reading fine print and doing fine sewing. In view of these things it will be well to observe the following rules in the use of the eyes:

Avoid all sudden changes between light and darkness.

Never read by twilight, or moonlight, or

Never read by twilight, or moonlight, or on a very cloudy day.

Never read or sew directly in front of the light, or window, or door.

Never sleep so that, on the first awakening the eyes shall open on the light of a window.

Do not use the eyesight by light so scant that it requires an effort to discriminate.

A BOY'S SIGHT STRANGELY LOST AND RE A BOY'S SIGHT STRANGELY LOST AND RE-STORED.—The editor of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Witness tells a remarkable story of a little boy in that region who waked up one morn-ing last winter and discovered that he was blind. He is twelve or thirteen years old, blind. He is twelve or thirteen years old, and up to that morning his sight had been perfect. When told the second time by his father to get up, he replied: "Father, is it daylight?" "Yes, long ago." "Then, father," the little fellow sadly said, "I am blind." And so it was. His sight was gone.

The boy was recently taken to Nashville for medical treatment. The doctors declined to do any thing for him, however. But during his stay in the city his sight suddenly returned, when he threw his arms around his father's neck, and exclaimed: "O, father, I can see."

THREE MEN WOUNDED BY THE EXPLOSION OF THERE MEN WOUNDED BY THE EXPLOSION OF A CANNON.—Upon the departure, the other afternoon, from New York, of the Seventh Regiment for their encampment on Staten Island, a cannon was fired at the foot of White Hall-street, as a salute, and by a premature discharge, Frederick Gilbert, John Donnelly and John Welch were knocked down and badly injured.

A Horse Disemboweled by a Bull.—John Towberman had a valuable horse killed recently by a vicious bull, near Mint Spring, Ky. The horse was gored in the abdomen, and lost nearly the whole of his entrails between the point where he was attacked and the spot upon which he foll and died, a distance of about a hundred yards.

EXTRAORDINARY DISCOVERY OF A CANNON A small bruss cannon has been found at the bottom of a deep well of the Castle de Cluey in France, with the date of 1258 upon it. The date of the invention of cannon has historically been assigned to the year 1323-sixty-six years later.

Of the ships lost at sea, and never more heard of by survivor or fragment, some are supposed to be fixed in mid-water. Like those fossil remains which we dig out of a rock or quarry—at once preserved and buried in a stratum so many measured feet from the earth's surface, and so many immeasurable miles from its core—these submerged but not foundered vessels are imagined to rest forever between an unfathomed depth of water above, and a fathomiess depth of water below. who died in India some few years ago, leav-ing a large fortune, had become attached to and married a person much beneath her in station—a sous officer of gendarmeric. regret the stop she has taken, although the gendarme did turn out to be the brother of her femme de chambre; and she did meet with him first of all (by accident, of course) dressed plainly at the bal Mabille, whither she had gone one evening escorted by the suivante, who had told her that the greatest ladies in Paris were seen in that seductive place, and that no harm could possibly be thought of any lady going there in company with her maid. The lady's daughter (by her first marriage) had grown—since the establishment of her mamma with the ex-gendarme—from a fine child of twelve into a lovely girl of sixteen.

The honest gendarme had behaved with exemplary kindness to his daughter-in-law; it seems that the menage was progressing as well as could be expected, when, in March last, came a tremendous shock to its tranquility, in the shape of an offer of marriage for the young lady from a traveling commission agent, who had supplied the wine for the family, and who had been admitted on familiar terms, in consequence of the cultivation of his manners, which seemed far above his station. The demand was, of course, treated with contempt—the young lady bearing one of the best names in England, and entitled to a large fortune—and the dismissed lover, bidden to remember the great distance between the bright particular star he had dared to woo, was dismissed, on the part of the gendarme in particular, with every demonstration of contempt.

The next day, however, the young lady the part of the gendarme in particular, with every demonstration of contempt.

The next day, however, the young lady was missing, and a letter from Langres aunounced that she had chosen to act for herself, and had eloped with the commission agent; the marriage had, therefore, become a necessary conclusion, and the young couple were, consequently, united. The commission agent, whose manners are above his station. gent, whose manners are above his station turns out to be an escaped forcat, who has just been restored to his place in the bagne at Christmas, having been recognised at Bordeaux, in the Cathedral whither he had socompanied his young wife, to show her the splendors of the Fete-Dieu. The mother in-sists upon a divorce.

Another Indian River Navigable.—The only Indian rivers heretofore regarded as navigable have been the Brahmapuna, the Ganges, with some of its tributaries, the Hoogly and the Indias. But recent explorations have added to this list the Godavery, which rights in the central monatorious which, rising in the central mountainou-regions of the peninsula, pours its waters through a broad delta into the Bay of Ben-gal, about half way between Calcutta and Cape Comorin. Capt. Young, early last summer, in the dryest season of the year, ascended the river in the steamer Arthur Cotton to Koyieltha, ninety-two miles above Cotton to Koyieltha, ninety-two miles above its mouth, and in a smaller steamer succeeded, without difficulty, in reaching Dumagudiem, at a distance of 143 miles from the sea. In view of this discovery, measures are in progress to make the river commercially useful, and the English Government are about establishing depots at Mahadeopure or Chinnar and Cocanads. Troops destined for Nagpoor will hereafter be sent by way of the Godavery.

DUCAL MODE OF MARRYING OFF A DAUGHTER. The Duchess of Gordon, says the London cor-respondent of the New Orleans Delta, was respondent of the New Orleans Delta, was very expert in managing to get rid of her three girls, whom she married to a Duke apiece, and would have procured them two each if it had been legal. She caught his Grace of Bedford rather sharply, as the story goes. The Duke of Bedford and the Duchess of Gordon were going to a picaie. The Duke was to call for the Dowager, but somehow the Dowager was off to the picnic first, and the daughter was at the door waiting to follow, but without the means of doing so. The picture of a woman in distress got the better of the Duke's produce, and he gave her a lift f the Duke's prudence, and he gave her a li of the Duke's prindence, and he gave her a lift to the picnic, to be called aside, however, by the fury, old Gordon, the moment he arrived. "You have brought my daughter here in a carriage from town all alone—have you redected on the consequences? Your Grace, my daughter's credit is at stake; you must marry her;" and the Duke, perhaps frightened and weak, or perhaps liking the girl, and thinking he could do no better, married her—and not to repent it.

A DUCHESS DEVOTED TO GAMBLING .- Th Ouchess of Gordon, a cannie old Scotch girl would begin to play cards at dewy morn and would begin to play cards at dewy morn and at wax-light morn again was ever at the same table, watching for the turn of luck, and she knew how to make the most of it. When she got a good tump of gold and notes at her side, she would suddenly rise and sweeping off the spoils, exclaim, "Its vars wrong to play too much, and I'll een wish you a guter night" But when the luck went against her, she was an inexhaustible sitter, and would play for everything but land; the coach and horses at the door were frequently lost, before she would put a foot in the vehicle. And a wag wanted to play with her once for the servants and coachmen's liveries, with the provision and conchmen's liveries, with the provision that the clothes should be left behind and the servants taken home.

A Man Rus Over Twice on the Same Railway Thack.—The express train on the New York Central Railroad, going eastward, on the morning of the 4th, ran over a drunken man, lying on the track just east of Lyons, and killed him. When some laborers discovered the body, instead of removing it, they went to the station, three miles distant, to report. While they were gone, another train ran over the remains of the man, cutting up the body still more. The name of the killed we did not learn.

THE VICTIMS OF THE WASHOE WAR.-The The Victims of the Washor War.—The sum total of the loss of life at the hands of the Indiana in Western Utah, since April 15, is eighty-three at least; the fate of some of the missing can not yet be known. A STORY OF MARITAL DISHONOR—AN INJURED HURBAND FOLLOWS HIS WIFE TROUSANDS OF MILES AND SHOOTS HER SECUCES. A German named Ulrich shot a fellow-countryman, Jacob Baentz, a few days aince, at Houghton, Wis., without severely injuring him, while the latter was sitting on the wharf. U. says that B. had for some time been too intimate with his wife; had again and again invaded his marital honor, and that he and Mrs. U. had confessed their guilt, but had promised, in writing, to reform. Still B. continued to enjoy Mrs. U.'s .favors, and finally they eloped, and, having obtained a divorce, went to California together.

Ulrich, who by this time had become desperate and bent on revenge, followed the slayer of his peace to New York, and thence to California, where, hearing the pair were in Wisconsin, went thither, spending four months in the search, and at last finding B., endeavored, very naturally, but very nervously, to put an end to his existence. Ulrich says he was worth $8,000 or $10,000, and living happily with his wife, until Bentz invaded his Eden and ruined him in honor and purse. If Ulrich's story be true, as it seems to be Bentz deserved each most richly at the ourse. If Ulrich's story be true, as it seems to be, Bentz deserves death most richly at the susband's hands.

RECIPE FOR BLACKERERY JAM.—Gather the fruit in dry weather; allow half a pound of good brown sugar to every pound of fruit; boil the whole together gently for an hour, or till the blackberries are soft, stirring and mashing them well. Preserve it like any other jam, and it will be found very useful in families, particularly for children—regulating their bowels and enabling you to dispense with cathartics. It may be spread on bread, or on puddings instead of butter, and even when the blackberries are bought, it is cheaper than butter.

A Duchess Buying Votes with Her Kisses. The late Duchess of Devonshire went around canvassing for her party, and bribed all the men by letting them have a hearty kiss for their vote. Tinker, tailor, apothecary, plowboy and thief were all alike. It was a fair, comely dame, and lips that invited to bribery, and so the men kissed—the women screamed shame, and fie, and naughty, but her party laughed, and won.

Children Poisoned by Noxious Whede.—
On Thursday two little daughters of James Coe, and a son of Mrs. Organ, all of them living near Lebanon, Tenn., were out playing among the Jamestown weeds, and while doing so ate the seed from the burr of one of them. They were all immediately taken sick; the boy suffered greatly and died shortly after. The girls, however, are getting well.

RUMORED SLAVE INSURANCTION IN ARRAN-vas.—Private advices received in Memphis, Tenn., a day or two since, state that an in-surrection had broken out in the vicinity of Osceols, Ark., among the servile population.
The disturbances were quelled, but not until several slaves were severely wounded. The negroes, it is thought, were instigated by white men.

A New PLAY BY COLLEY Clones Bounce-CAULY.—Dien Bourcleault is writing a play, to be called Liomenta, in which, it is said, he will take off in trenchant style the American habit of making a great ado over every dis-tinguished foreigner who visits this country.

Very Romantic Affair in Paris Odd De- The Wherenbouts of Vessels Foundered at The Agricultural Exhibition to Paris American Invention Again Trius The Paris correspondent of the New York Express writes on the 22d ult. as follows:

The biennial agricultural exhibition The bicanial agricultural exhibition of France is now open at the Palace of Industry in the Champs Elysees. The show is, in some respects, the finest that has yet taken place in Paris. Broken, perhaps, by some mighty wave, or slowly but surely filled through some incur ble rent, they have gone down and down but it to the bottom. Through layer after layer of the yielding mass they sank, till the superincumbent weight of waters equipoised the subjacent floods.

There they are held as in the grasp of an accomplished destiny; lost forever to human sight and knowledge—the subject only of conjecture, hypothesis and mourning. Could we desery and descend to their strange abodes, below the sweep of currents and the rage of tempests, we might find every thing as in the fatal hour when the top-mast sank below the path of friendly keels, and yet the bottom grated on no reef or strand. All the semblance of life might be found there, stereotyped and embalmed by the very power that had in an hour or two of horror quenched every spark of vitality, and converted so many human beings into mummics and their floating home into a rocky sepulcher.—London Star.

PARENTS-IN-LAW'S GENEROSITY.—The Paris wags tell a funny story of a thrifty and not over scrupulous youth, about to espouse the daughter of a rich provincial couple. The parents of the bride visited Paris, to complete the preliminary arrangements for the marriage and buy a "set-out" for the young people. The mother informed her future son-in-law that he need give himself no concerd about a carriage, as herself and her husband had determined to present him with a handsome equipage. The gentleman, remarking that he knew the tricks of Paris tradesmen better than inexperienced strangers from the country possibly could, begged permission to be of the party, when the purchase should be made, in order to protect his betrothed's parents from knavery.

This generous and thoughtful offer was accepted, and the business was dispatched immediately. Conducting the old people to the most fashionable and expensive carriagemaker's in Paris, their guide succeeded in inducing them to buy a costly vehicle, which to the best of all, irrespective of country. Wood's American hay-cutter, constructed in France, from a model imported from the United States, by M. Peltier, jr., took the first prizes of its class, and carried off the great gold medal, besides.

Present Condition of Iveland. A correspondent writing on this subject

It can not possibly be considered satisfac-tory that amid all the acknowledged strides which Ireland has made since 1851 in mate-rial prosperity, emigration should so persist-ently continue, and to such a degree that no less than 86,690 Irish left their homes in 1859 for distant lands. The exodus continues at present at least at as great a ratio, and ac-cording to the most regret as ratio, and according to the most recent accounts, the population of the country is now 563,500 persons less than it was in 1851, when the last census was taken. And it is still less possible for the well-wisher of Ireland to notice the continuous falling off in the culture of cereal crops, and to observe in a totally opposite direction the enormous increase in the growth informed the carriage-maker that the customers he had brought him that morning were proviocials, and demanded five per cent. on the sale, which was at once handed over. direction the enormous increase in the growth of potatoes, without the greatest anxiety as to the consequences. I find, according to the latest statistical returns, that the number of small holdings (I speak of those from one to thirteen acres) is increased 6,000 since 1855, that the cultivation of cereal and green crops has in the same period fallen off 195,060 acres, but that the growth of potatoes has increased 218,000 acres. In 1859 no less than 1,200,000 acres were planted with that root alone, or, as nearly as possible, one-third of the entire quantity of land under plow or manual cultivation throughout the whole island. Now it is quite clear that some anomalous evil must exist, or that some detect must prevail in the administrative system, when a nation, in the anecdote is recounted by a Paris correspondent of the Emperor, illustrative of his good-breeding and perfect command over even the most ordinary emotions. At Fontainebleau, at the dinner-table, a blundering servant, a sort of French "Handy Andy," in attempting to fill the Emperor's glass with soda water, spilt nearly the entire contents of the bottle awar His Maiesty's sheadders. The man was, of course, terribly slarmed at this mishap, and stood behind the Imperial chair, awaiting the expected burst of rage which would have been apt to follow his stupid conduct in the houses of many gentlemen who pride themselves upon their refinement, but who are unable to control their tempers, in small matters. The Emperor did not manifest the least annoyance, but, with a good-humored laugh, himself wiped his, dripping shoulders, and again held out his glass, without even looking at the author of the contre temps. It is in triffes like these that Napoleon III shows his superiority over his uncle, who was a man of violent passions, which he could not restrain, especially under circumstances which made him sppear in a common-place or ridiculous light. administrative system, when a nation, in the time of peace and prosperity, loses in eight years nearly a tithe of its population.

Two Girls Steat Horses to See their Mother.—A correspondent of the Marysville Appeal, writing from Chico, Butt County, California, says:

A very singular occurrence took place near here on Saturday. A woman started from near Marysville, the latter part of last week, with her two daughters, for Yreka. On their way up, the three stopped at Lowery's Ranch, on Butte Creek. At this point the mother left her daughters and went upon her journey alone. On the day in question, the daughters one of whom is about fourteen, and the other one of whom is about fourteen, and the other twelve years of age, determined to join their mother at all hazards, stole two horses belonging to Maxey & Munn, of Lowery's Ranch, and "put" for Red Bluff. The loss of the horses was soon discovered, pursuit was given and the fair young culprits and their booty overtaken at the Bluffs. They were all, girls and horses, brought back on Sunday, and deposited at Lowery's. The horses went to grass and the girls to crying.

CHINE WITH ONE THREAD.—The Patent Office reports show that no branch of mechanical skill has been more pursued by inventive genius, of late years, than that of simplifying and cheapening sewing-machines, which, has resulted in producing a machine remarkable for its simplicity: which makes a good strong seam without liability to rip, even when cut into small pieces, by using only one thread. into small pieces, by using only one thread direct from the spool. After many experiments with other machines, this one has been adopted by the large hosiery manufacturers of Philadel-phia, in whose work a peculiarly firm and elastic seam is required. RECIPE FOR BLACKBERRY CORDIAL.—The following is said to be not only an excellent beverage, but a cure for diarrhosa, &c.: To balf a busifel of blackberries, well mashed, add one-fourth of a pound of allspice, two ounces of cinnamon and three ounces of cloves. Pulverize well, mix and boil slowly till properly done. Then strain or squeeze the juice through homespun or flannel, and add to each pint of the juice one pound of loaf sugar. Boil again for some time, take it off, and while cooling add half a gallon of the best cognac brandy. Dose for an adult, half a gill to a gill; for a child, a teaspoonful or more, according to age.

REMARKABLE STORY OF A MYSTERIOUS DIS-APPEARANCE.—Mr. Bunn, who was thought to have fallen a victim to thieves and mur-derers at Jersey City, N. J., some weeks ago, has returned to Rathboneville, N. Y., his residence. He says that, after taking dinner at Cawaco, by was conscious of nothing more residence. He says that, after taking dinner at Oswego, he was conscious of nothing more until he found himself at see, robbed of every thing except his watch, which was hidden on his person, on board of a schooner, the captain and crew of which would answer no questions. At the end of six days he was put ashore in Florida, where a kind planter after hearing his story, farmshed him the means to reach home with. As soon as he is perfectly recovered, he intends going to Jersey City, to have the mystery fully investigated.

Practical Chiracation of the Fourth—
